went to Don Stevenson Design of Naples, Florida. (This project also won BUILD LLC a 2015 Golden Aurora.)

A 2013 Labor Day thunderstorm swept through the Naples area. During the deluge, lightning struck the Y's main building, sparking a blaze that destroyed about 70 percent of the structure containing the gymnasium, fitness center, locker rooms and administrative offices. The new construction project has resulted in a new and improved, two-story, 50,000 sqft center with, among other things: Two gymnasiums; a cafeteria featuring healthy food items; classroom space; a commercial-grade kitchen for culinary arts instruction; new poolside outdoor fitness training area; and six group exercise rooms. Called a "Healthy Living Center," the new building houses services such as pediatrics and family medicine; speech, physical, massage and occupational therapy; and vision and dental screenings in addition to regular YMCA programs. There is also sickchild care for working parents. Future plans also call for a new Youth Development Center that will allow for expanded enrollment; additional scholarships will become available for families that cannot afford the childcare and education programs the center will provide. Vegetable gardens will dot the 20-acre campus, enabling children to learn about agriculture and proper nutrition. The new YMCA, with what is restored and what is coming, is second to none in Southwest Florida.
